Date	Program	Description/Background
Sept 10	Catherine Balcom will give a Power Point presentation on "The Art of Seeing" in photography	Catherine Balcom has studied fine art, photography, cinema, and graphic design at UCLA. She is a fine-art and commercial photographer. Her work has been published in newspapers, magazines, websites, and television, and has been shown in solo and group exhibitions. Catherine is the founder and president of the "Photographic and Digital Artists" of the Palos Verdes Art Center, and is co-producer of the Port of LA annual "Art on the Waterfront" festival. She teaches workshops, is a gallery docent, and has juried several art competitions.

Members can view the images and vote on their favorites. The evaluator will be Paul Moses, who teaches photography and art at El Camino College also does commercial photography.

August meetings were a lot of fun!

On August 13 about 50 SBCC members and guests met to watch Scott Deardorf demonstrate his Photoshop magic using special brushes and the smudge tool. Thank you Scott for an entertaining and instructive evening.

Two weeks later about 30 of us gathered for our kick-off print evaluation for the new year. James Russell went through piles of prints dispensing advice and talking with makers about what they had intended and how the results might be improved. There were lots of interesting comments. James, thank you for a valuable evening.

Field Trips --- City Lights at The PIKE, Long Beach

The first Field Trip of the new year will be held on the evening of Thursday, Sept. 20. We will do some twilight and night photography in the Belmont Shores/Aquarium/Pike area of Long Beach. Meet at the Ferris wheel at 7 PM. Parking is available at the aquarium parking structure across the street --- plenty of room, but the cost is $10 per car. For those who want to carpool, we'll make arrangements at the next meeting, or contact Betsy Treynor, bgtreynor5@gmail.net, or 310-375-6348.

For night shoots such as this one, it is important to stabilize the camera, so bring along your tripod, or monopod, or bean bag, which ever you prefer. Or, you might want to just turn up the ISO to 1600 or 3200 and live with the grain (digital noise). It's up to you. I've done this shoot before --- I am bringing a tripod. And don't forget to bring a small flashlight to read the buttons and displays on your camera.

Betsy is also planning future field trips. If you would like a particular outing, please contact Betsy about it.

CURMUDGEON'S REPORT

Our official club curmudgeon (John Bohner) has issued his 3rd curmudgeon's commentary to News & Views. The trouble with this commentary is that it is not very curmudgeonly. In fact, it offers downright sage advice to all photographers, especially us. I commend these words to the entire club. See what you think.

The Curmudgeon's Corner

Fear.
There, I've said it.
Fear.

Your curmudgeon is reminded from time to time how much he and others allow their photography to be shaped, limited and maybe even improved by fear. Fear of what you ask? You tell me. What scares you about making photographs?

This month's poll on the SBCC web site asks us if we fear being hassled by authorities when photographing places that may be terrorist targets. For example, the zeal to protect New York City's subways led authorities to try and ban photography down in those dank tunnels. They failed but every photographer who read about it felt a chill. Fear of being arrested for photographing with the intent to portray NYC as dirty and gritty, that's a new one.

How about fear of failure, ridicule or embarrassment for your latest attempt to get out of your comfort zone? Are we really worried what people will say about our pictures? This curmudgeon is far more brutal on himself than ANY OF YOU. I can fill books with stuff about self doubts and the regret over wanting attention. So why should I worry about what you think? WHY should YOU worry about the rest of us think. We are all struggling with the same demons. Cut yourself some slack and go have some fun.

I fear people, or more accurately, I fear trying to interact with them in a nice way so as to be able to craft a good photograph of them. Its tough to change from being an old curmudgeon. My first attempt was at the Irish Fair a few years back. A cute woman was walking about with fairy wings. I pushed myself and asked if I could take her picture. I think I expected her to run away screaming about the pervert with a camera. Instead, she was flattered and posed for me, letting me get several nice shots. One of those photos is now one of my trophies. What do you fear?

There are times when I see people in a camera store screwing up their courage to ask for help on how to use their camera. No decent salesperson is going to laugh at them but you can see in their body language and tone of voice, the fear that haunts them. Have you tried all the features on your camera? What are you afraid of?

Some fear is reasonable. If you are out trying to photograph a thunder storm and you notice your hair standing on end. Get fear. Get someplace safe. This curmudgeon will not present your stunning lightning storm images at a club meeting for you if you got yourself killed. Sorry. Standing really close to a high speed train is another of my "fear is trying to tell me something" situations. My hat is off to mountain climbers, sky divers and other excitement junkies who happen to get good shots. Me, I'll let physical fears influence my choices.

Fear can make your images better. I work hard to practice and know my craft for FEAR that when presented with a subject of incredible beauty or other worthy factor, I will blow the damn shot and hate myself for it. Let your fear work for you, not against you.

Now boldly go and make some pictures.
Your SBCC Curmudgeon
John Bohner

Thank you John. We see now that "All we have to fear is"

Quotes to Ponder

There are many teachers who could ruin you. Before you know it you could be a pale copy of this teacher or that teacher. You have to evolve on your own. -Berenice Abbott

To compose a subject well means no more than to see and present it in the strongest manner possible. -Edward Weston

Nothing is ever the same as they said it was. -Diane Arbus

I don't know what good composition is.... Sometimes for me composition has to do with a certain brightness or a certain coming to restness and other times it has to do with funny mistakes. There's a kind of rightness and wrongness and sometimes I like rightness and sometimes I like wrongness. -Diane Arbus

After following the crowd for a while, I'd then go 180 degrees in the exact opposite direction. It always worked for me, but then again, I'm very lucky. -Elliott Erwitt

Nothing happens when you sit at home. I always make it a point to carry a camera with me at all times...I just shoot at what interests me at that moment. -Elliott Erwitt
